

Future continuous

Future continuous, also known as the future progressive, is a grammatical tense in English used to describe actions or events that will be ongoing at a specific point in the future. It emphasizes the duration and continuity of an action that will be happening at that time. This tense is formed using the future tense of the verb "to be" (will be) and the base form of the main verb, along with the present participle (-ing form).

The structure of future continuous is as follows:

Subject + will be + base form of the verb + -ing

Here are some examples of future continuous sentences:

1. I will be studying all night for the exam tomorrow.
  - In this sentence, the action of studying will be in progress in the future, specifically all night.
2. They will be traveling to Europe next summer.
  - This sentence indicates that the action of traveling will be ongoing in the future, specifically during the next summer.
3. She will be working late at the office on Friday.
  - Here, the action of working late at the office is described as happening in the future, specifically on Friday.
4. We will be celebrating our anniversary at a fancy restaurant tonight.
  - This sentence conveys that the celebration will take place in the future, specifically tonight.

Summary Chart:

Structure	Example
Subject + will be + base form + -ing	I will be studying all night for the exam tomorrow.
Subject + will be + base form + -ing	They will be traveling to Europe next summer.
Subject + will be + base form + -ing	She will be working late at the office on Friday.
Subject + will be + base form + -ing	We will be celebrating our anniversary at a fancy restaurant tonight.